

English Enhancement Day – a day of English-filled fun!

The much-anticipated English Enhancement Day was held on 9 March this year.

Throughout the day, ambassadors and students engaged in 'Shall We Chat', in which they read tongue twisters, guessed at riddles and talked in English. A 'Spelling Bee' counter was set up in the covered playground where students looked at pictures and then spelled the words. Stickers collected from these two activities were used in redeeming popular collectibles like football jersey key rings from Manchester United, Chelsea, Arsenal and AC Milan, Angry Birds files and key rings of musical instruments. It was a truly strong incentive to join in the games!

The book fair this year consisted of many delightful books ranging from classics to young adult contemporaries to colourful, educational books. It was a joy to flip through the books, and some chose to buy the book of their choice.

Along with many heartfelt messages, songs blared from loudspeakers during recesses, and music videos were played on a screen at lunchtime. Dedicating an inspiring song to classmates and teachers to cheer them up – what could be more meaningful?

The focus of EE Day, of course, was the Sherlock Holmes drama by the Chunky Onion group that had been advertised in English lessons. A combination of suspense, hilarity and love, it was highly enjoyable. Sherlock Holmes was asked to find a lost girl who was kidnapped. After travelling and investigating around with Dr. Watson, the girl was found with the kidnapper who had a surprising identity.

A few schoolmates were invited onstage in join in the drama, which added to the funny content and made the story more real. The audience was so enthusiastic and asked many questions! Undoubtedly the drama was a perfect ending to such a pleasantly eventful day.
